The Supreme Court of Georgia surprised everyone when it overturned more than 50 years of precedent in Quynn v. Hulsey, purportedly because a statute enacted more than 15 years ago abrogated it.

Now that a few months have allowed for the decision to be interpreted and put to use, our attorneys will explore the case and how it significantly changed the landscape for personal injury claims in Georgia related to the conduct of employees and their employers, including motor carriers and their drivers.
