Properly identifying and understanding the players in a workers' compensation claim is often one of the most overlooked and underestimated aspects of claims investigation. Resolving whether an employee is an "independent contractor" (in deed rather than just in name), whether the employee is legally documented and where the employer fits in the often confusing chain of employment can determine your best approach to the claim. Identifying these roles can go beyond the initial investigation and assist in formulating and implementing strategies for mitigating exposure on ongoing claims, particularly with regard to return-to-work issues.

Webinar will offer 1 general hour of CE credit for attendees registered with the Georgia Department of Insurance.

Instructions to join the webinar will be emailed to registrants closer to the date of the program.
